What participants are saying . . .

“It’s called the “One Year to Live Retreat” (OYTL). I just came back from one -- a 44- hour encounter with other Christian men. A true adventure – it wasn’t boring or irrelevant – and it certainly wasn’t hypocritical, as we put ourselves on the line for what we believe. You should try it. I will put myself on the line for you and guarantee that you will come out of that weekend a better man and your wife will know it. I totally, fully, and completely recommend this weekend if you are serious about renewing your life. At my little church we now have a core group of five other men who went through the retreat with me. Things will change in our community because of us.”

“I spent twenty years climbing the ladder of success only to find out at the OYTL retreat that I had the ladder leaning against the wrong building”.

“The One Year to Live Retreat is a unique opportunity to experience spiritual and personal growth as part of a special fellowship of brothers.”

“What I thought were my biggest liabilities are my greatest assets. They’re assets because I can share them with others to give them hope.”
